

Biosecurity Success Depends on You

Did you know that regardless of how many pigs you care for, whether it's a single show pig or thousands of market hogs, you are part of the pork industry?

And, just as you are responsible for keeping your show pig healthy, you share the responsibility of following biosecurity protocols to protect all pigs in the United States.

Safety Tips for Before, During and After the Show

- ✓ Before the show: If a pig is sick, contact your veterinarian and do not attend the show. Clean and disinfect your show equipment and trailer before going to the show.
- ✓ During the show: Do not share equipment with other exhibitors and monitor your pigs for any signs of illness. Report any symptoms to the on-call veterinarian for the show.
- ✓ After the show: Quarantine your pigs and watch for signs of illness. Clean and disinfect your trailer and all equipment.

For more information, visit go.porkcheckoff.org/healthyshowpigs

© 2024 National Pork Board, Des Moines, Iowa USA.
This message funded by America's Pork Checkoff Program.